Women of Tomorrow Changes Lives

Abby Wint, RN
 Women of Tomorrow
 2008 South Florida
 Graduate & Jr. Mentor

My mother and father were both drug addicts and alcoholics. Growing up, I was surrounded by drug abuse, violence and poverty. It never really dawned on me how much my grandmother meant to me and my family until the day we learned she had been murdered in our own home, choked to death for money by my mom's boyfriend. I was very hurt, angry and depressed. My siblings and I were soon split up by the members of our long-time church. At this point in my life, I was deeply depressed and emotionally scarred. I constantly isolated myself from my peers. One of my teachers recommended me to the Women of Tomorrow Program. From my freshman year to my senior year I blossomed from a child who had low self-esteem and in a dropout prevention program to a young lady who was doing well in honor roll classes.

Thanks to Women of Tomorrow, I became the first in my family to graduate from high school, and thanks to a scholarship they gave me, I became the first in my family to attend college. Today I am a registered nurse and Mentor with Women of Tomorrow. I am also a mom, a wife, and also a Women of Tomorrow Mentor with my former Mentor Judge Pratt at my old high school. I plan to become a nurse practitioner and a motivational speaker. I would like to help others just as so many people have helped me. Women of Tomorrow has made a huge positive influence in my life and I will be forever grateful for all that it has done for me.

Stefanie's story:

Thanks to Women of Tomorrow and her own tenacity, passion and brilliance Stefanie is living the life of her dreams. Stefanie was one of our very first group of mentee graduates 18 years ago; she has soared ever since. From an internship at WTVJ in 2001 she has risen through the ranks and is now Director of Events at NBCUniversal Telemundo Enterprises where she oversees all company events throughout the US and Mexico. Her work ethic dates back to working fulltime while obtaining a college degree from Barry University, for which she received a scholarship. She is happily married with two small children who motivate her every day. Women of Tomorrow instilled in Stefanie a belief that she could do anything and to never give up. She also credits a special relationship with Women of Tomorrow's co-founder Don Browne and his wife Maria: "I am the executive, wife and mother I am today because of their mentoring and love." To say Stefanie is exceptional is an understatement. She is a shooting star. We are grateful to know her; she exemplifies our mission in the very best way with her leadership and in the way she lives her life.

Alaisha's story:

In high school Alaisha started a community program with tutoring services for children and was student class vice president. Undeterred by the lack of financial support, she paid her own way through much of college. Alaisha received the Katherine Rundle Denise Moon Scholarship from Women of Tomorrow to help her pursue her education.

Deeply intelligent with strong STEM expertise, and actively involved in community from an early age, Alaisha has the capability to bring resolution to large-scale issues. Currently completing her Bachelor of Science in Mechanical Engineering at MIT, she is working on a footwear device to improve the gait and stride of the elderly and prevent dangerous falls. She has worked on a swimming prosthetic and even wheelchair adaptations to allow the disabled in third world countries to traverse rough terrain. What can't this tremendous young woman do? The answer is not much; she is a shooting star.

Every day Alaisha works to be her absolute best. From Women of Tomorrow she drew strength from the inspiration and support provided by remarkable women mentors. And she learned that her best is not only enough but that she is an inspiration.
